

Fine Arts Week Offers Many Talents

By JO-ANN RADIN

Monday opens Saint Joe's Fine Arts Week which will continue until Thursday, Nov. 3. This program is in conjunction with the Core I program, and will feature a variety of artists and performers in major art forms involving painting, architecture, music, dance and drama.

Artistic works will be displayed in the Halleck Center ballroom throughout the week, and evening performances in dance, drama and music will be held in the college auditorium.

Artists whose works will be on display include: Ms. Lilian Fendig, an outstanding artist of the Midwest and winner of over 30 awards for her work. She resides in Rensselaer with her own art studio. Also Ms. Ann Reidel, assistant professor of art; Ms. Nancy Lynch, a professional artist who may be commissioned to paint the Halleck murals and has her own private art studio in Rensselaer; Father Robert Onofrey, assistant professor of music; Frank Fischer, professional architect who designed Halleck Center and Schwieterman Hall and was responsible for several renovations on campus two years ago; and works by outstanding students from Roger Beehler's art classes in Rensselaer Central High School.

On Monday at 7:30 p.m. the Columbian Players will present "A Classical Cavalcade." This will consist of scenes from Macbeth, Taming of the Shrew, Cyrano de Bergerac and The Glass Menagerie. Featured in these scenes will be Don Earle, Diana Kachlik, Debby Lange and John Rowley.

Postponement of the cavalcade from last weekend was due to the religious symposium held during the week of Oct. 17.

A special attraction this year will be the Broadway actor and former president of the Columbian Players, Mark LaMura, who will do a scene from Edward Albee's The Zoo Story. LaMura is presently starring as professor Mark Dalton on "All My Children" on ABC-TV; he also starred in "Under the Yum-Yum Tree" on Broadway and served as an understudy to Robert Redford in "Sleuth."

Tuesday there will be a lecture by Fischer on his own style of architecture and also a lecture by Reidel on modern art.

On Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium, the professional dance company Dance Kaleidoscope will present an evening of modern dance with dance execution and commentary.

Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium, John Kozar, the talented American concert pianist who resides in London, England, will present a lecture-recital from outstanding composers. Among other major composers, works featured by Ives, Copeland and Gershwin will be performed. There will also be a lecture by Father Onofrey and Father Ralph Verdi (assistant professor of music) on art.

Fine Arts Week activities will be concluded by the 75-voice SJC chorus in concert under the direction of Dr. John Egan on Sunday, Nov. 6 at 1:30 p.m. in the auditorium. This concert also will be a highlight of Parents' Weekend which concludes Fine Arts Week.

False Fire Alarms Create Life And Death Situations

By BELINDA BROWN

(Second in a series of three articles dealing with false fire alarms from Halas Hall.)

At Saint Joe's many things can be joked about or laughed at. One subject, however, is definitely taboo: fires.

Ever since the Administration Building fire in 1973, when so many lost so much, fires are no longer something to be casually joked about. Pulling a false alarm may seem like fun to some but it is serious business as far as the administration is concerned, and should be with the students.

For example, on Jan. 28 at Ball State University in Muncie, a fire alarm went off at 8:49 p.m. in Edwards Residence Hall. The Muncie Fire Department was summoned, the building evacuated, and the students made to stand outside in the sub-zero weather for nearly 20 minutes until it was determined that the alarm was a false one pulled by a prankster.

A little after midnight another alarm was sounded. Once again the dorm was evacuated, but not with the speed as during the previous alarm.

Some students didn't leave the dorm at all, figuring it was another false alarm. The only problem with their reasoning was that it was wrong, for several, nearly dead wrong.

One freshman who slept through the alarm had to be rescued from his third floor window by the fire department's snorkel unit.

Another student found unconscious and suffering from smoke inhalation was given mouth-to-mouth resuscitation by a university policeman.

At McNutt Quad, a dormitory at Indiana University in Bloomington, the problem is substantially the same. In McNutt, which houses approximately 1400 students, the problems with fires and false alarms is devastating.

During the 1975-76 school year there were 61 false alarms and three fires. During the 1976-77 school year there were 42 false alarms and again three actual fires.

This situation greatly concerns the administrators of McNutt Quad. Russ Bumba, the Coordinator for Residence Life in McNutt and his staff are presently working on a program intended to increase student awareness on the dangers of fires and false fire alarms.

So as you can see, the problem with false fire alarms concerns many schools, both large and small, both public and private. This is not just another opportunity for the administration to hassle students. False alarms are more than child's play; this type of irresponsibility should concern every responsible adult here at Saint Joe's.

No special preparations have been made in the event that Saint Joe's is besieged by another harsh winter like the one that nearly paralyzed the college community last year, according to superintendent of buildings and grounds Alfred Hentschel, and Jim Novak, director of food services.

Last year, problems in heating the dorms, providing hot water, and shortage of foodstuffs prevailed on campus as the nation experienced its most severe winter in decades. Hentschel, however, isn't anticipating another winter of the same proportions. He says, "I don't foresee a bad winter. A winter like the last one comes along once in every hundred years."

He therefore expects routine maintenance to protect the dorm residents from the discomfort they endured last winter. "We'll just take things as they come," he says.

Several improvements in the heating system have been made, however, which could prove beneficial in coping with the cold weather, notes Hentschel. The heating pipes in Noll and Bennett halls have been cleaned by blowing acid through the pipelines to remove any residue which had accumulated there, hindering the passage of heat to the rooms. The Gallagher and Halas hall heating systems also have been cleaned. Hentschel comments that "In the construction of Gallagher and Halas halls, there is too much window space, with only single-thermal panels between floors, allowing for very poor insulation from the cold wind blowing unobstructed across the fields directly west of the campus."

According to Hentschel, there is nothing he can do to improve this situation. "I advise all students to move all furniture at least two feet from the heaters to improve its circulation and to keep the curtains drawn to provide better insulation."

Hentschel says there should be no foreseeable problems concerning hot water this winter. The problem last year was that the water was not getting to all of its destinations, especially Drexel Hall. "Over the summer, the old circulating pump has been replaced, so there should be hot water available at all times," Hentschel says.

Novak also hasn't made special winter preparations, because the food service always keeps an abundant supply of food on hand, enough to last more than ten days, he says. "The only shortage possible is of perishable foods, such as milk, bread and many fruits and vegetables."

But Novak claims that even if the situation arises, he will still have enough non-perishables to keep the student body properly fed for at least three more days.

Lawrence Schaal of the agronomy department at Purdue University claims that the occurrence of another winter similar to last year's is highly improbable.

"I can only rely on the pattern set by winters in the past to make a prediction about this coming winter," says Schaal, "and according to that pattern, the winter of 1977-78 should be a normal one."

Schaal could not make any absolute, detailed forecast, such as expected temperatures, amount of snowfall, and so forth. His comments were merely his interpretation of available data.

Irene Farrell (fifth from right) was named Homecoming queen before Saturday's game. Suitcases Not Needed

"Suitcase college" is a slang term used to describe an academic institution of higher learning in which on any given weekend, a large number of students take off for the wild blue yonder that is home.

Unfortunately, Saint Joe is moving more and more rapidly in the direction of becoming such an institution. On some weekends, major weekends even, students decide that they simply must get home; otherwise they will be bored to death.

Of course, there are also a great many students who do stay that say they cannot find anything to do on these weekends. But this claim of the "nothing to do with my weekend" holds little water.

As a case in point: fall follies, which was held just two weeks ago, was well publicized. Teams could have been made up of any and everybody. However, a clear minority of four teams (each with six members) showed up.

Two of these teams were all-male from Gallagher Hall, one was all-female from Halas, and the fourth was comprised of both men and women who represented STUFF. In all, four dorms (Gallagher, Halas, Justin and Noll) were represented.

Score one against complaints that nothing happens here on weekends, and another one against the students' lack of interest.

Another case in point was Homecoming last weekend. Although this was the biggest weekend of the school year, a number of students left the campus to the alumni. Homecoming for the alumni does not mean that students have to leave.

There are many things that can be done during the weekends, if students would only look and find them. After all, something to do won't just come and slap you in the face!

Social Preview

By DEBBY LANGE

Friday, Oct. 28, movie double-feature — Children of the Damned, 9:30 p.m.; Frenzy, 11:15 p.m., auditorium.

Halloween fare is a double feature, consisting of one very mediocre movie, and one really superb Hitchcock flick.

Children of the Damned is a piece of tripe that was made in the period when so-called "horror" movies just couldn't get the old shivers running up and down your spine. It concerns a group of mutant children who make nuisances of themselves in London by making others behave queer.

Frenzy, on the other hand, is recommended seeing for the discriminating horror/suspense film buff. Necktie murders are occurring all over London as the murderer builds a trap for the implication of a friend. Nice guy. Anyway, a great movie starring Jon Finch and Barry Foster.

Saturday, Oct. 29, Halloween mixer — featuring Roadmaster, 9:30 p.m., ballroom.

Everyone will be expected to dress up in costume for this mixer, although it is not mandatory. Like last year, prizes will be awarded for costumes in various categories.

The band, which is alleged to be "highly talented" may very well be, but judgment shall be reserved by this columnist until they have had their chance to be heard.

Wednesday, Nov. 2, SA social event — jazz concert featuring the Harvey Mandel Band, 9 p.m., ballroom.

My sources tell me that this should provide a very interesting evening, but then again, my sources are biased. Mandel, I was told, was considered as a replacement guitarist for Mick Taylor after he left the Rolling Stones, but the Stones opted for Ron Woods instead of Mandel.

I do hope to see many students there so that they can start the program as scheduled, and not have to wait for any inebriated Pumas to find their way to Halleck.

Saturday, Nov. 5, mini-concert, dance — featuring Thom Bishop and the All-Star Frogs, 9:30 p.m., ballroom.

This band is quite popular in this area and when you hear them, you'll know why. They're fantastic!

Thom Bishop is acoustic guitarist for the group, and he is just as great as any I have heard. This is one group that is a must for all students to hear. So come on, and since this is Parents' Weekend, bring the folks along. They'll like it too.

Sunday, Nov. 6, movie — Funny Girl, 7:30 and 10:30 p.m., auditorium.

Starring the always-great Barbra Streisand as Fanny Brice, the legendary Ziegfeld girl, this movie takes off from the very first. Singing in this movie has the inimitable Streisand sound, which is first-rate. This movie is definitely worth seeing. Also stars Omar Sharif.

P.S. When attending these events, stay away from the drunks—they may have weaker stomachs than they think.

Alumni Cite Campus Changes

By TOM CANNON

Homecoming weekend usually receives a barrage of alumni and this year was no exception. Alumni were all over the place, watching the football game, visiting their old dorm and enjoying the "Happy Hour." Some of the alumni find changes only in the buildings and the campus, while others find changes in the spirit and attitude of the students since their time. Whether the alumni find the change in attitude great or very slight depends on when they graduated and how long it has been since they have been here. These are the responses of what some alumni think about the present student attitudes:

John Gaun (Class of '42)—"It has changed tremendously. When I was here, we didn't have any girls and we had to run all over looking for them."

John Baumann (Class of '61)—"Well, basically since I've been here there's a lot more freedom of mind with the liquor laws, room visitation and restrictions on campus."

Gerald La Fontain (Class of '35)—"Well, you just can't describe how things have changed here. I graduated here in 1935 and there was an unbelievable change even during four years here. It's funny because for 42 years and longer, we thought we were the pioneers of our days, that there is nothing really new and now it's really funny to notice the students and the changes. You got to have change and that's the way it should be."

Jim Heimann (Class of '64)—"Well, I don't know. I suppose what's noticeable now is that there are girls here and that we lost the game to Wabash. I really don't think it has changed that much."

William Staudt (Class of '33)—"I haven't seen any students. I think everything is about the same since I've been here."

Murray Sims (Class of '54)—"It has changed quite a bit, because when I was here, all students were men."

John Scheidler (Class of '47)—"I don't think things have changed a whole lot. It's more civil-ed, I think. Today we had a lot of spirit of course; when we were here we didn't have much freedom. So we've seen a gradual change. Whenever I come here, they make me feel good."

John Thieme (Class of '46)—"You have a real fine community here. I was telling my children today that the football game was really a social gathering, something you don't find in big institutions."

Bill Krodell (Class of '50)—"They don't have anywhere near the amount of spirit we had when we were in school. When we were in school, we had about 400 kids and they made more noise than 1,000 kids would think of making nowadays."

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor,

Complaints are all you hear around Saint Joe's, in fact they were even the star of an editorial in the STUFF issue of Sept. 29. I can't see why people constantly complain about this school. If they don't like it, why don't they just leave!

What I'm trying to say is that I really don't have any complaints about Saint Joe's, at least I don't vent mine outright. When you live as far away as I do (Massachusetts), you have to learn to live with these things. This school is my "home away from home" for eight months whether I like it or not. I guess I'm learning to like it. In fact, I'm impressed with many aspects of Saint Joe's, and I've met many people that I'm honored to call my close friends.

Being only a freshman, you may think that I haven't been here long enough to make any clear judgments concerning Saint Joseph's. I don't believe that. I think I'm sane enough to make my own judgments and consider them acceptable. What I've seen and learned have suited me just fine. Many students say that they're not going to finish their education here. I intend to do everything within my power to stay all four years and be proud to say that I'm a graduate from Saint Joseph's College.

Sincerely,

A Satisfied Freshman

Editor's note: The following letters are in response to, and directed to the author of a letter printed in the last issue.

Dear Cold and Constipated,

When you wake up in the morning, do you take a look at the dirt and rubbish in the halls that was swept out of your room the previous day? And speaking of trash, may I remind you that a student picks up the trash from each dorm and if he makes a mess, he is supposed to clean it up, and often he fails to do so?

As to slimy substances in your sinks, do you really think we are responsible for this? Do you want to know what it could be? Try toothpaste, hair cream, Noxzema, or just plain car oil after a student has just worked on his car. Have you ever noticed the hair left in the sinks or the paper towels thrown all over?

By the way, where is your porch? I've never seen one on this campus.

What is Mr. Hentschel supposed to be looking for; what performances? I must have taken up the wrong career because I sure as hell do not play-act at my job. I clean because I want to; I was not forced into this job. I have worked in offices and factories and I prefer cleaning because I derive a sense of accomplishment and I'm proud of my "performance." I didn't know that paying a janitor for a job well done was considered a waste of money. I do enjoy my job but I cannot afford to work for nothing.

Thank God, you are not my employer because I would consider you a bigoted and biased person. You couldn't or wouldn't be able to comprehend two sides of the coin.

I work in Justin Hall and I would like for you to visit Justin and tell me face to face that I am incompetent or that I'm stealing your money for no rendered services.

Sincerely,

Millie Whited

a so-called "incompetent" janitor.

Dear Cold and Constipated,

You sound like a very well-educated young man. Since you are a well-educated young man and have been around Saint Joe for at least two years, you should know that Mr. Hentschel has many other duties besides timing a janitor in the restroom and checking each toilet paper dispenser. Even I don't have enough time in one day to check every restroom in every building on this campus, especially first thing in the morning. I can only trust my employees to do their best.

If you or any other students have any complaints about any janitorial services, please feel free to see me in the janitorial office. We are between the post-office and computer center.

I would enjoy very much speaking to you, "C. and C." Please stop in.

Thank you,

Anita Harsha

Wabash Dampens Homecoming, 25-10

By MONIQUE LACOUTURE

Another Homecoming has come and gone, although not as happily as last year. Butler was the victim last season, getting beaten by an underdog Saint Joseph's team 28-18. Once again this year the Pumas were underdogs on Homecoming, and remained that way as they were defeated by Wabash 25-10 in front of a packed alumni weekend crowd.

"We gave our maximum performance, but had some breakdowns at the wrong times," commented Puma head coach Bill Jennings after the game.

Saint Joe held a 10-6 lead going into the fourth quarter on quarterback Ray Banary's (so.-Mer.) field goal, Mike Palmore's (sr.-WSF) touchdown run and an extra-point conversion by Banary. The fourth quarter proved decisive, though. The Little Giants rallied for three touchdowns and an extra point to win, 25-10.

"We know we're at fault," Jennings said. "We had no cohesiveness and no discipline out on that football field. We were beaten by a good football team. They proved that they belong ranked tenth in Division III."

Defensive end Greg King (jr.-ESF) was selected most valuable player by the alumni. "He's a great football player," praised Jennings.

Injuries have taken their toll on Puma players this year. Wide receiver Dan Abens (sr.-Gal.), and defensive tackle Earl Hammond (sr.-Drx.) will be out for the remainder of the season, while defensive end Bill Bryant (so.-Ben.) is still questionable.

Saint Joseph's now holds a 2-4 season record and 1-1 Indiana Collegiate Conference mark.

It will be a clawfight to the end as the Pumas battle the DePauw Tigers on Saturday in Greencastle, Ind.

"This is a must win for us," Jennings says. "We'll try to win it anyway we can."

Saint Joseph's was handed a 17-7 loss by an overpowering Butler team Oct. 15.

While the Pumas held a 7-0 halftime lead on a four-yard run by Shelton plus a successful conversion point, the Bulldogs stormed back to score 17 points in two quarters to win.

Saint Joseph's final home game will be played Nov. 5 against Evansville.

"This will be a very important game for us," Jennings predicts. "Not only is this our last home game, but it's also Parents Day."

Saint Joseph's final game of the 1977 season will be at Valparaiso Nov. 12.

Golf Future Looks Bright

CROSS COUNTRY

Coach Dave Smith's team finally notched its first win, 28-27 against Grace College, in a triangular meet with Valparaiso and Grace Oct. 15. The cross country record stands at one win, six losses, with one loss coming at the hands of Valpo, 28-23.

"I'm pleased with our performances," Smith says. "Things are beginning to look up, after that first win at a state meet."

Joe Rincon (fr.-WSF) and Andy Barnes (so.-day) were applauded by Smith as "doing a real good job." Barnes and Rincon finished first and second respectively in the win over Grace. Both runners will be representing Saint Joseph's in the NCAA Division II Nationals to be held in Wheaton, Ill., Nov. 12.

In the Little State Meet last Friday SJC placed 13th out of 20 teams.

"These runners have been improving all season, and along with John Marcotte (fr.-WSF), I'll have a good, strong nucleus for next season," comments Smith.

The team's next and last race will be at the Indiana Collegiate Conference meet Oct. 29.

GOLF

"We were greatly improved over last season," says golf coach Richard Scharf.

In fact, the team finished its 1977 season by tying for fourth at the Indiana Collegiate Conference golf tournament Oct. 16-17.

SJC shot 698, while Ken Renspie (jr.-Drx.) was an individual medalist winner with a score of 166 to finish seventh.

"Next season we'll be a strong team because we'll have our number one, two, and three men returning, and we'll be losing only two seniors," says Scharf.

Bob Kurtz (jr.-day), Mike Hart (so.-Gal.), and Renspie will be returning, while Tom Guiden (sr.-Gal.) and Mark Maciejewski (sr.-Noll) will graduate.

SOCCER

"It's been a long season, but we're still a young team," coach Mark Craven (jr.-Drx.) says about the soccer club. The Pumas recently recorded their first win of the season, against five losses, with a 5-1 home victory over Catholic Theological Union Oct. 15. They then suffered a 5-1 defeat by Notre Dame Oct. 18, also at home. Craig Andrews (sr.-day) scored the Pumas' only goal.

"It was a close game up to the beginning of the second half," Craven comments. "We got messed up by some rotten calls by the referees also."

Niba Johnson (fr.-Aqu.) leads the team with seven goals (four of them came in the 5-1 victory), while Andrews has two. Dan Bamberg (so.-Ben.) and Jim Talbot (fr.-ESF) have also been playing strong games for the Pumas.

Their last home game and final match of the '77 season will be against Rose-Hulman Nov. 12. Starting time is 1 p.m.

VOLLEYBALL

Things have been shaping up for the women's volleyball team. The girls own a 9-7 record, but have been showing aggressiveness and power in their victories.

Butler and Notre Dame were swept at SJC 15-10, 15-7; 15-9, 11-15, and 15-4 respectively. The Pumas also beat St. Mary's and Bethel, while losing to IUPUI-Indianapolis, Marian, and Manchester.

"This sport takes a total team effort," says student manager Terri Vincitore (jr.-Jus.). "When they're aggressive they win, and when they slack off they lose."

"Nancy Scott (fr.-Jus.) has been a consistent spiker, Sue Emerson (sr.-Jus.) has been great on the set-up, Pat McGuire (so.-Jus.) and Mary Ann Klemm (so.-Jus.) have been passing well, and Regina Fisher (fr.-Jus.) has been playing well overall," Vincitore comments.

Tonight the team takes to the road to face IUPUI-Fort Wayne. The girls have their last home match Saturday, when they play DePauw and St. Francis in a triangular at 11 a.m.

Four more away games remain on the schedule before the IWISO small college tourney Nov. 11-12.

Duwayne Mill (42) of Saint Joe was stopped short of a first down on this run from punt formation in the fourth quarter Saturday and Wabash went on to score six plays later, boosting the Little Giants' lead from 12-10 to 18-10. Defenders Lance Richardson (81), Chuck Fischer (63) and Mark Noffsinger (86) close in to make the stop.

5 Club Sports Get Varsity Status

Last week the faculty and the athletic committee approved a motion to accelerate five club sports to the varsity level. These sports include men's and women's track, men's and women's tennis and cross country.

Before this motion was approved, these sports were officially on the club level, meaning that the college allotted each team a sum of money and the club was responsible to meet their expenses through this subsidy. These expenses included the hiring of referees, purchasing uniforms, and travel. The change to varsity level financially will be based on the same principles of the club-level sport with the only added expense in the area concerning awards, such as trophies and letter jackets.

Father Ambrose Ruschau will continue to coach the men's and women's tennis teams and Dave Smith will coach the men's and women's track teams along with cross country.

Says Father Ruschau, "putting these sports on the varsity level will give more students the incentive to join the teams. And if we have more students join, then we will probably get more talent."

In another motion, the faculty approved a proposal stipulating that any athletic club wishing to be funded must apply to the athletic director for such funds; the athletic director will subsequently make appropriate recommendations to the faculty athletic committee.

"I'm very pleased with the adoption of varsity status for track, tennis and cross country," says athletic director Richard Scharf. "This policy will provide more of an incentive for the individual athletes in these sports since they will be working toward the achievement of athletic monograms."

Better Officiating Needed

Saint Joseph's pre-season basketball drills opened Oct. 15, and while most in-season attention is paid to the players and coaches, this year has seen much off-season consideration given to officiating.

Basketball officiating and how it might be improved is a topic of growing concern to fans, players and coaches these days, since it is generally agreed that the improvements in the game itself have not been matched by improvements in officiating.

"Let's face it; officiating is a tough job and we should do whatever can be done to improve this aspect of the game," reports Saint Joseph's head basketball coach George Waggoner. "One of the problems may be that we ask the official to do so many things."

Counting is one of the problems, he says, noting that the men in striped shirts must be sure that teams get over the ten-second line in time, that an offensive player moves the ball in five seconds, and that no offensive player stays in the lane more than three seconds.

"It's hard for an official to be really on top of the fouls and other violations when he spends so much time counting," Waggoner points out. "Moreover, I don't think you always get a uniform count on things like lane violations; I've seen some pretty long counts and some rather short counts during the course of one season."

This is where the shot clock comes in, Waggoner points out. Some counting-as in the case of lane violations-would still be necessary, but the shot clock would be reset by the official scorer and would indicate failure to shoot within a specified time automatically.

"I have only one major objection to the shot clock-that it would take away the delay game, be it the four-corner offense or whatever," Waggoner says. "I think the delay game is a well-devised bit of coaching strategy, and I think we could reach a compromise here, for example, by using the shot clock for the first 35 minutes of a game, but then not using it during the last five minutes or during overtime periods."

Counting isn't the only problem with officiating these days, he adds. Good, young officials are needed, and some colleges have even started refereeing schools with a viewpoint toward providing a new crop of quality whistle blowers.

"I don't really think money is that much of a problem," Waggoner says. "It has been charged that officials don't get paid enough, but I do feel the general pay scale is sufficient."

"What is needed is to bring good, young officials along more quickly-they don't need ten or 15 years of work at the high school level first. If they're a good one, they can move up more quickly than that."

HOMECOMING MEMORIES

New, Old Pumas Enjoy Festivities

By MARK QUEBBEMAN

I wonder how many people woke up last Sunday morning with a hangover from over-indulgence the day before. I would assume quite a few did. Of course, who would blame them for enjoying themselves; it was a great weekend!

Tom Funk (jr.-Gal.), president of Blue Key, organized one of the finest parades ever to grace the streets of Rensselaer. The floats reflected the ingenuity typical of the students of Saint Joe, with Gallagher Hall winning the president's award, the business club winning for originality, and the freshman class winning for color.

Dave Miller (sr.-Gal.), president of the senior class, assisted Gerry Lasko, the director of alumni, in inducing the majority of students and alumni to become slightly inebriated at both the highly successful "beer and brat" tent and the always-popular happy hour immediately after the game.

"Winning isn't the only thing," but the Puma gridders and coaching staff performed so admirably in their 25-10 loss to the Little Giants of Wabash that every alumnus was proud they went to Saint Joe's.

Funk and Miller both express their gratitude to the Rensselaer merchants, plus Homecoming organizers, who helped make Homecoming '77 the best in years. Funk and Miller also deserve congratulations on jobs well done from the student body.

This float, sponsored by the freshman class, was voted "most colorful" by Homecoming parade judges. Carrying the theme "Bowl 'Em Over," the float depicted a puma bowling down Wabash football players.

Saint Joseph's pom-pom squad made its marching debut during the Homecoming parade through downtown Rensselaer Saturday morning. The girls also gave a dance performance at halftime of the football game.

Becky Wiegand (jr.-Hal.) was one of several students who assisted with the "Pumaville Playschool" during Saturday's game.

"Slay The Giants" was the theme of Gallagher Hall's Homecoming float. This float won the president's award as best overall float and depicted the Pumas (David) slaying the giant (Wabash Little Giants.).

Bob Valentine (jr.-Mer., right) chats with an alumnus in the beer and brat tent before Saturday's game. Students and alumni mixed everywhere on campus and enjoyed a sharing of good times and old times.

Parade watchers of all descriptions turned out for the Homecoming festivities. These viewers, who can't wait for Halloween to arrive, joined parade fans across from the Jasper County courthouse.

Tailgate picnic-parties were much in evidence across the north campus prior to Saturday's football game. Students, alumni and friends produced a turnout of 4,000 fans for the game with Wabash.

The post-game happy hour in Halleck Center drew hundreds of alumni for rehashing of old memories through early evening.

Beer and bratwurst, served at a tent immediately southwest of Raleigh Hall, was a popular alumni stopover point much of Saturday. Here John Kelley (so.-Gal.), Mike Fiebelkorn (so.-Gal.) and Mike Lawless (jr.-Ben.) cook bratwurst on outdoor grills.

"Pumaville Playschool" turned the Halleck Center conference rooms into a noisy, busy area Saturday afternoon. Children of alumni were entertained here by students during the game; here Judy Cherry (jr.-Jus.) organizes a game of "musical chairs" with the youngsters.
